

News from the Library ... Parenting

Thank you to the Delta M&M's who helped with our library inventory! We made great progress, re-discovered some hidden "treasures" of the library and had fun working together.

Starting with this edition of the Ambassador, we will provide feature articles on different subject areas, special books and new book arrivals. On graduation weekend, it seems that Parenting would be a good subject to start with. Congratulations to all our graduates and their parents!!

From toddler to teenager .... parents accompany their children through life. But being a parent is one of the toughest jobs in the world. In the "Parenting" subject section of our Delta Library, you will find valuable guidance, inspirations and encouragement. You will find books on how to "drug-proof" your kids and how to really get to know them (Ross Campbell). "Secrets of Effective Fathers" is especially geared towards fathers with long work-hours and little time for family matters. And James Dobson's classic "Parenting is not for Cowards" helps with the challenges and frustrations of child rearing. Barbara Johnson puts a humoristic spin on the role of mothers. Check out her books to learn how to laugh (again!) about our trials and errors as parents. Gloria Gaither reflects on "What my Parents did RIGHT" and Cline Foster and Jim Fay focus on how to teach children responsibility in their book "Parenting with Love and Logic".
